SPECIAL NOTICE PARKS FLORAL MAGAZINE. Under New Management

I think many a word of thankfulness will be heard when this number of the Magazine reaches its subscribers. Everything was running smoothly and happily; a pleasing Christmas number had been mailed and the Company was looking forward to a good business during the Winter. Suddenly, and literally from a clear sky, trouble loomed up in form of legal difficulties, primarily over the disposition of a piece of machinery for which the management had no further use. Most of us know how little it takes sometimes to start the ball rolling, and how often it is quickly out of control.

As a result, the lands, buildings, greenhouses, plants, seeds, etc., belonging to the old Company, were offered for sale, and I purchased the Magazine, Machinery, Operating Building, New Greenhouses, Water Power, Farm, and all the stock of live Plants, sound Bulbs and Fresh Seeds, and shall operate these departments of the business under the old name, LAPARK SEED & PLANT COMPANY, but of which I am now the sole owner and manger.

Of course many of the old, trained employees have been reinstated, and the very first thing I have done is to print and mail this number of the Magazine, and also to send to each of the Company's customers a copy of my Spring catalogue of Seeds, Plants and Bulbs.

The numbers of the Magazine for January, February and March cannot now, of course, be published, but I shall continue to mail to each subscriber entitled to them, three additional numbers of the Magazine after the date of expiration printed on the cover of your Magazine-I shall probably not change the printed date as that would be an endless and really unnecessary job, but you will understand your subscriptions are paid for until three months after the printed date.

Your old editor will take care of the reading matter in the Magazine, and, I think, this will please most of you, and from time to time I expect to have interesting messages for you.

Sincerely yours,

H. L. STEWART, Publisher.

FRIENDS' FLORAL CORNER

FloralFriends: I get so much good informa-tion from P. F. M. in general, and wonder if those living in climates where a hardy annual climber is desired have ever tried the Wild Cucumber vine? The one fault I find with it is its straggly appearance at the bottom, but I have solved this by planting Sweet Peas in front of it. It is perfectly hardy and begins blooming in July and continues until frost. Nother scheme I have is planting Asters in large, wooden candy pails, when I set my plants outside in Spring, about three plants to the vail. Then they may be brought in when the pail. Then they may be brought in when hard frosts come and will continue to bloom indoors until Xmas, while if one waits until they are in bloom to lift them they never look or do so well.

I have a yellow Columbine that is wonderful. Coming into bloom almost as early as the blues and whites, and continues blooming until heavy frosts. I have gathered ripened seed, full blown flowers and the tiniest buds on the plant at the same time. It is of the long-spurred type and very graceful. I won-der how many of the Floral Friends living in cold, short summered climates have admired

Snapdragons and wished for them in vair. They are listed in many catalogues as tender perennials. Last year I started fifteen plants from seed, and had them blooming by August 1st. I didn't cover them because I supposed

1st. I didn't cover them because I supposed it would be of no use, so imagine my surprise to find six of the old plants surviving 32 degrees below zero, with an unusually small amount of snow even, and seedlings galore. Those who love Geraniums, but have none too much room for them in Winter, might like to know how I gathered all my slips together, all colors and kinds, and planted them in a half of a small keg. It measures about a foot high and probably eighteen inches across the top. It is one big bouquet. The other half of the keg I planted with pink Begonia, and it is a "thing of beauty and a joy forever", for it is never out of bloom.

for it is never out of bloom.

Mrs. Lissa Coats, of Texas: I can go you one better on the wild Ferns. I have a wonderful bed of them in my yard, a shady nook on the varieties, all wild ones; three varieties of wild Violets; the double English Violet; Lily of the Valley, Petunias, Snapdragons, and a number of beautiful wild plants whose names I do not know. ## HARDY LILIES AND HOW TO GROW THEM

Soil, Varieties, Propagation and Culture BY BESSIE BERRY GRABOWSKII

HAVE asked our Editor this month to permit me to write you about the Hardy Lily, for two reasons: first, because so few people are growing them, as they so easily might, and secondly, because some of the very handsomest varieties, those from Japan, China and other European countries, do not arrive who already know what I am writing-as I feel sure many of you do—it will not hurt, and it will benefit the beginner so much.

It is the first year, with a great many, and I can never forget my first experience with the beautiful Rubrum Lily—it is funny enough to tell you, and I shall certainly do so some time.

A PLANTING OF THE MAGNIFICENT LILIUM REGALE

A PLANTING OF THE MAC in this country until late in November or December, but may be planted any time in your garden when the ground is not frozen.

I often plant bulbs after Christmas, here in Virginia, and I told you in December how easy it was to keep the ground open for late bulbs, by thickly covering with leaves.

I am going a little into detail with this article, as many of us amateurs are just beginners, and need these suggestions, and those

It has been the accepted idea for so long that the Lily was a difficult flower to raise, and to propagate, that there is a great pausity of these gorgeous flowers in our home gardens, save, perhaps, the Madonna—the Lillium Candidum—and the Tiger, or Lillium Trigrinis. But there are many, many others so very lovely, enough varieties to have Lilies from June into September, and just as simple to grow as these more intimate varieties; certainly not any more difficult than the hardy perennial, and not half so much so as the

I read just a short time back of one man who, with only one fifty foot border of herbaceous perennials. had also from eight to ten varieties of Hardy Lily.

TESTACEUM, OR NAN-KEEN LILY

Only those who have grown them successfully can assure us of the glory of the Lily, and the real satisfaction of growing them.

From three bulbs of the Lilium Speciosum Rubrum, bought at a sale in December a year ago came up four stalks of bloom, carrying twenty odd royal rose colored, spotted blossoms.

From just one bulb of the glorious Auratum, the Gold Banded Lily of Japan, and China, planted in the very late Fall two years ago, I have had bloom both seasons. of Lilies measuring over seven inches across, and this is considered one of the tenderest Lilies to make survive the second year.

Proper Drainage

There are a few very salient points about the Lily that I wish to call particular atten-tion to. The first and foremost is proper drainage. Whether it is the Lily that likes a boggy place. or a sunny location; whether bulb or stemrooting variethey all needgood, clear drainage, so that the roots do not stand in wster that will settle and get stale around them. They can grow in most any good garden soil, which contains a good part sand, if the proper drainage is secured.

This drainage may be achieved in several ways: one is, when you are laying off a Lily bed, that is a bed where you wish to assemble several varieties which contrast well together, and require the same treatment, soil, etc., dig out the place, say a foot deep, put in a layer of pebbles; over this, a layer of sand and gravel, mixed in with which you may put very well rotted manure, or bone meal, and then put over it all soil, and then sand—in this layer of sand put your bulbs, and over that put sand again, then the garden soil.

This is a very safe and excellent way to prepare a well drained Lily bed, but it is not necessary to do all this to have lilies, and 1, for one, prefer to place them at intervals, towards the front, in among my shrubbery; or in my hardy border among the perennials.

The majority of Lilies are hardy, though I would advise a light covering when the weather sets in very

LILIUM PARDALINIUM-Leopard or Panther Lily When we read of the old gardens of Persia, Syria and other countries of antiquity, we learn that the Lily and the Rose were grown side by side; much was this the case that they are coupled in verse and in art, for ages, and yet we rarely hear of a garden that hasn't the Rose, and how seldom do we hear of the everyday garden that contains more than the fewest Lilies. And why? Because it is, as I have before said, an accepted idea that the lily is so difficult to grow. All I ean say is ask any one who is successful with roses, and they will tell you that in any but the most favorable, sections they require the most careful watching, and alomst constant small attentions, to really have blooming roses. Anotherthing

TENUIFOLIUM-Coral, Fern-Leaved, Tom Thumb or Tiny Lily-Brightest of All in Color

that has made the rose seem more natural to have is that only in very recent years have the Japanese and other foreign and American lilies been known so familiarly to cul tivation, I will not attempt to tell in this article the stories of their discoveries, by those whose names many of them bear, and the splendid treatises of them by Wallace, Miss Jekyll, Krelage

They make a romantic story but and others. we want to know as briefly as we can something of their culture and requirements, and some of the favorite and easiest cultivated varieties.

GLOW AND GLOOM

A bright Summer's day, And the world was gay; went an outing, I went an outling;
With glee and shouting;
I came back poutling,
With fear and doubting;
And bright joy had fled.
For sweet love was pead.

With a bitter cry, And a longing sigh, With fair hope laid low, And a weight of woe, And a weight of the fallone, With my heart's sad moan Tis a Winter's day, And the world is gray.

DATURA CORNUCOPIA, OR HORN OF PLENTY

Will some one who grows it please tell me how to start the seed and to take care of the plants of Datura, the Trumpet Flower, or Horn of Plenty; I have never grown it, but am anxious to do so.—Mrs. Martin Peterson, R. 2, Datura is an Arabian name, but the Latin name for this flower is Brugmansia, and there are a number of kinds, Cornucopia, or Horn of Plenty, being the most common in the garden and particularly interesting. It is also potted for house blooming. The flower pot in our il-lustratio n is of three t rumpets, one within the other, and the flowers sometimes come that way, al-though not always, varyingfrom one to three. It was found in South America, about thirty years ago, by an Orchid collector, and brought to this country, giving flowers in yellow, white, blue and deep crimson. Daturas contain strong narcotics. D. Stramonium, the contain strong narcotics. D. Stramonium, the Thorn-Apple, or Jamestown Weed, is sold in drug stores for medicinal purposes. This special variety is frequently found on rubbish piles, a big, rank smelling plant that has thorny seed balls that are sometimes, I believe, dried and used as Winter decorations. This particurs species was first seen at Jamestown, in 1607, by the settlers from England, who ate the pods with most curious effects, as related by Captain John Smith. The seeds of other varieties of Datura are said to have been used for the priests at Delphi, resulting in the historic oracles, and by Peruvian priests who were thought to have prophetic powers.

oracles, and by Peruvian priests who were thought to have prophetic powers.

Daturas are very easily grown. The particular one of which you inquire, Cornucopia, can be grown outdoors in the North and stored in cellars through the Winter; in the South, and in Southern California, they are almost everblooming outdoors, but they do not flower so very well in pots as their roots are so large and spreading and require so much water. Sow the seed in the house, early enough in the Spring to have plants to set outside in the garden when to have plants to set outside in the garden when Summer has actually arrived and there is no further danger of frost and damp, cold weather; the seed sprouts in five or six days, so that you can vary the sowing to suit your particular location. A well grown Datura Cornucopia is four or five feet tall, and the flowers seven and eight inches in length, the usual color violet. EDITOR.

FRIENDS' FLORAL CORNER

Dear Floral Friends: For over twenty years I was an occasional contributor to the Magazine. Then our home, in Iowa, burned, and soon after my father died, and we have been "on the move" ever since. But now we are settled in a home of our own and one of my first acts is to write to the "Corner". How I do miss the old, familiar names. Indeed, I think Adella Veazie and Albert Vassar are the only ones I have discovered as yet. I am wondering what has become of Mr. Park. Is he still alive? or has he gone to grow flowers in the garden of God? When at the dear old home I had a large yard with many kinds of shrubs and flowers, and a conservatory, and two very large bay windows for house plants, while here I have only a 50x140 foot lot without a tree, shrub or flower, and our little bungalow faces north, with only one small window for Winter flowers.

We have planned a double row of Ferns and Shasta Daisies on each side of the porch in front. But what can I put in front of them that will bloom? The Daisies are late here. Then east of the house there is a space about 20 feet wide, but so shaded by our own house and the one next door that it gets the sun for only about three hours in the middle of the day. What can I put there? I want flowers, perennials, next the house and shrubs on the line. The reason I say perennials is because I am no longer able to do much work in the garden, or among flowers. The "best man in the world" loves flowers, too, and is always willing to dig and hoe. Already we have a list in the making of perennials and shrubs to purchase this Spring. Although we have long Winters here most shrubs and hardy bulbs do well. But our Summers are so very short and always cool. Now I hope some flower friend who has grown flowers under similar conditions will come to my aid with suggestions. Mrs. W. E. Hawley, Duluth, Minn.

FLORAL FRIENDS' CORNER

Dear Floral Friends: I think I must write about my Zinnias. I bought several packets of separate colors and one of mixed, and sowed some along the face on side of my lot. They make such a delightful hedge that I shall plant all of them along the fence next Summer. I have a lot of Canterbury Bells to plant in the bed in front of the Zinnias, to bloom early, and will protect them during Winter in a cold frame, in which I can also start the Zinnias early. Then, when the Canterbury Bells are finished blooming I shall have some dwarf Zinnias to plant where the "Bells" had been. I have Summer blooming Cosmos, Zinnias, African Marigolds and Asters in one bed, along the fence, and in another part of the garden is a glorious abundance of perennial Phlox, in variety and color, most of it proabout my Zinnias. I bought several packets Phlox, in variety and color, most of it prothick, in valiety and cook, most of lepto-cured at Lapark many years ago—it is hardy, I have scarcely ever had a plant to die in all these years. But when they grow to be very large bunches I divide and transplant in an-other bed, or sell some so as to work the ground thoroughly and plant something else. I have one bed with many white ones in one end and pink ones at the other end. A great many of one color in a mass 13 delightful. If only one root of each kind is planted they should be two feet apart, and seed of Larksnould be two feet apart, and seed of Larkspur, or Poppies, may be sown, in August, in between them, to bloom in early Summer. Any other plants one prefers may be used instead of those I have suggested. Asters, Larkspurs and Poppies are also fine to plant in bulb beds, to bloom after the bulbs die down. I had Larkspurs bloom in a bulb bed in early summer then pulled it up when it had fine Summer then pulled it up when it had fin-ished blooming, and had Asters ready to set in the same bed. #### QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. (a) This Summer my Gruss an Teplitz Roses either failed to make buds or they fell off. I had a few flowers but not very many; they seemed to blight, or stop growing, just as the bud was ready to form and stood still for weeks before making new growth and it was again attacked. A. (a) Your Roses probably suffered from some irregular soil condition. This Spring cut out the dead parts, but do not prune more than you have to. Next Fall stir into the surface soil a good handful of bone meal and, if possible, give your entire bed a good surface dressing of stable manure when the ground freezes; in the Spring work it into the soil. Also, before ground freezes up, sprinkle enough air-slaked lime to make the surface white and then rake it in. (b) Steep tobacco

This spring, after yon dig the bed and before you rake it for Zinnlas, sprinkle it white with airslaked lime and work it in; later, if your plants are affected, split the stems lengthwise where an insect's entrance is observed and enwhere an insect's entrance is observed and enwhere an insect's entrance is observed and endeavor to catch the worm. After that bind up with a strip of muslin and the plant will rapidly recover. (d) Red Spider is really a mite, and it attacks plants that are grown where it is hot and dry, but is easily controlled by watering frequently, using a syringe to get good force, on sunny days. Spraying with tobacco soap solutions and dusting with sulphur are also effective.—EDITOR.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. What shall I do for little black worms on my Pansies?—H. J. G., Washington.

A. Spray with 40 per cent. nicotine solution, purchasable in any good drug store, according to directions on the package. Or use a good, strong soap suds, of Ivory soap. Watering with a strong spray of clear water, from a syringe, is sometimes effective.-EDI-

FRIENDS' FLORAL CORNER

Dear Floral Friends: I feel as our sister, Mrs. A. R. Corsen, of Va., does about the Hit or Miss Garden. I have such a flower bed myself. You can pick all at once, and in the same bed, snapdragons, petunias, hardy red pinks and verbenas, with candytuft on one side and nasturtiums on the other for borders. And they are all among my rose bushes. My how pretty! In bloom all the time. I live fix to a small florist, who has to try hard to make his flower beds look prettier than mine, even though he has only one color, or kind, in a bed. I, too, am very much interested in slipping roses. But somehow I do not have such good success with them, though I do about the same as our Sister Rose Lover does.

slipping roses. But somehow I do not have such good success with them, though I do about the same as our Sister Rose Lover does. I had cause to go to the Experimental Station of Agriculture in our State, and was told if I would try their plan I sure would be successful. And so I gave it a try. Take a crock, that would hold water, fill two-thirds full of sharp sand, set in my cuttings of roses, and water so that there would be at all times an inch of water above the sand. Keep it where there would be plenty of light, but not where rain would wash out the sand. After all the trouble I did not root any. So am back to my own way making cuttings—at the New Moon, in June and October, and cover them with glass. I find this the best method I have yet tried. Set them in partial shade, near a grape vine is good, for afternoon sun suits

A PLEA FOR MORE VINES

Like a whole lot of folks I know I just had Like a whole lot of folks I know I just had no place for vines. But one day I got looking around really interested to put in a few and was surprised to find several spots that were ideal for the purpose, and would give me that much more beauty in my yard without interfering in the least with anything else.

One was a small, dead cherry tree, in the back yard. I dug around it, added a bucket

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. Is the Spider Lily hardy?-F. P., Maine.

A. Paneratium, or Spider Lily, is not hardy. Most of the Paneratiums come from Africa, Southern Asia and Europe, and they need in most cases a high temperature while growing, and a rest after flowering. Gradually withhold watering after flowering and put them indoors where they will have good ventilation and a medium cool temperature, keeping them through early Winter in a semi-dry state. Towards the end of January repot, or leave them in the pots and give them a topor leave them in the pots and give them a top-dressing of sheep or cow manure, and then liquid manure once a month after the roots are growing well, and take them into the liv-ing room where the temperature is sixty at night; keep them in the sun, so that their growth will be steady. At this time they need lots of water and should never become dry at the roots. Also syringe the foliage on bright days.—EDITOR.
